

For Old-School Casanovas

If you're a sucker for the classics, this one's for you. For $650, Parisian restaurant Saint-Germain is serving up a four-course menu, complete with a glass of champagne and a rose to melt the hardest of hearts. Think scallops dressed with a mussel and mushroom sauce, followed by pan-fried foie gras complemented with a sweet wine reduction, alongside a herb salad and glazed baby onions. Then there's rosemary-roasted turbot with Pommes Anna—a classic French dish of sliced potatoes layered and cooked in butter. Top it off with a chocolate platter: a trio of chocolate fondant, chocolate ice cream and chocolate mousse. It's only available on the actual day—so don't blink or you'll miss it.
